Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization (Part 2)

Continuing this week, the next series of statements/questions and answers regarding the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization abortion case and how it may affect Roe vs. Wade.

"Roe v. Wade is 'settled law.' It's a 'foundational constitutional right.'"

- As a whole, the U.S. has never "settled down" and accepted Roe v. Wade. A "constitutional right" to abortion remains highly contested. This is evidenced not only by the number of proposed and enacted laws seeking to restrict it,⁷ but also by the enormous number of grassroots groups and activists working to overturn it.
- For something to be a "fundamental constitutional right," it must be deeply embedded in the vast majority of Americans' understanding of what freedom means. If half of the states want to ban abortion, it was never part of the American fabric in the first place.

"But polling shows most Americans support Roe v. Wade!"

- Most Americans do not understand how extreme the Roe v. Wade and Planned Parenthood v. Casey rulings are. Roe and Casey both held that even in the last trimester, states must allow abortions for "psychological or emotional or familial" reasons.⁸ In effect this means all abortions are permitted up until birth.
- When people are asked whether they support this, they answer NO. Gallup reported in 2018 that only 13% of Americans actually support the abortion permission Roe and Casey allowed: abortions through the third trimester. And less than 30% of Americans say abortion should "generally be legal" in the second trimester.

"Won't women be jailed for abortion in the future?"

- This argument is designed to frighten people away from the pro-life movement. The pro-life movement seeks to penalize the doctors who profit from abortion, and not women.

"Isn't overturning Roe just forcing religion on people?"

- When asked if abortion is a religious issue, the Supreme Court has said no. Moral concern about abortion reaches far beyond any one religion, and these laws have the legitimate secular purpose of encouraging childbirth over abortion. The fact that some religions oppose abortion doesn't change this. For instance, the Supreme Court had this to say in another case Harris v. McRae, "That the Judeo-Christian religions oppose stealing does not mean that a State or the Federal Government may not, consistent with the Establishment Clause, enact laws prohibiting larceny."
- Abortion advocates claim that, "however we may feel about abortion," we should not impose our views on others. But they do not hold themselves to this standard. How we feel about abortion –or rather, what we recognize it to be –is the whole issue. If abortion is a wrongful attack on human life, as millions of American women and men believe, it is wrong to prevent states from legislating against this injustice.

"Shouldn't reducing abortion be done through changing the culture, and not through Supreme Court decisions or legislation?"

- Most people on both sides of the abortion debate agree that reducing the number of abortions is a desirable outcome. Yet in this country, the CDC estimates that there are more than 600,000 abortions performed every year.
- Common sense tells us that when something is made legal and accessible, you often get more of it, and when you make something more difficult to obtain, you usually get less of it. Where abortion is legal, women will have less resistance to choosing it when they feel they are in an impossible situation. So too will more people around the pregnant woman feel comfortable recommending she have an abortion, an important factor when a large proportion of women report feeling some degree of pressure or aborting to please someone else, often their partner.
- Evidence suggests that laws restricting the funding of abortion (like the Hyde amendment preventing Medicaid funds from going to abortion) or limiting its availability, involving parents, and providing women with more information lowers the rate of abortion.

Final part will be next week.

God bless you,
Father Joseph Byerley

WORSHIP/PARISH CENTER

In the past few weeks, a few changes have been made to the Worship Center with the removal of the sanctuary, the sanctuary's wooden platform and the large crucifix.

With the growing needs of the parish it was determined that a large gathering center would be of greater benefit to our parish and school communities.

Also, we now refer to the Worship Center as the Parish Center.

To that end, the worship center is being renovated back to its original purpose—a Parish Center—to better serve the needs of the parish.

Please know that additional changes will continue to be made over the next few months.

K OF C NEWS

The Knights of Columbus (K of C) serving our parish are happy to announce the merger of two of the organization's local councils into one. This merger will go a long way to helping the K of C combine their efforts and ideas to serve Holy Angels Parish, its School, local communities and national/international endeavors even more effectively.

The newly united council includes the former Most Holy Redeemer Council 11713 and Monsignor C.G. McCorristin Council 1994. It will now be known as Saint Patrick Council 11713. With its combined membership and resources, the Saint Patrick K of C looks forward to meeting the needs of our parish, our Mother Church and the world.

The K of C, a Catholic fraternal organization, counts nearly two million members in countries across the globe. Its charitable works range from helping meet the needs of local parishes and Catholic schools to aiding major relief efforts in the U.S. and abroad.
